Plane crashes on Utah Lake; fourth fatal wreck in 20 years

Edmond Hills man, flying a twin-engine plane through heavy fog, was when his 320 Cessna smashed into thick ice covering Utah Lake on Thursday night, according to Utah Sheriff's deputies.

James Talley, 43, President of North American Manufacturing Corp. in Sparks, was flying home from Reno, Nev., when he hit bad weather. He said it would be safer to land at Municipal Airport. The Sheriff's Office said the plane approached the airport and then headed upward again, as the pilot was not happy with his flight path. They lost sight of the plane in the fog and moments later heard a loud thump.

Salt Lake International Airport controllers were directing the pilot because Provo does not have controllers working at night. Talley was given clearance to land, but after failing to call in his flight plan—a mandatory procedure for pilots before landing—the controllers feared that the plane had crashed and alerted the Sheriff's Office.

Authorities attempted to rent a helicopter but could find no pilots in Provo willing to fly in the bad weather. A Heber City pilot agreed to take them up, but the fog was too thick to see anything from the air and the search was called off until morning.

At 9:30 a.m. Friday, searchers found the wreckage strewn across the ice. "It made a pretty big hole but didn't go down," said Dan Foot, a Utah County Jeep Patrol member. "We came suited to go underwater and found the debris sitting on top of the ice."

Friday morning, debris could be seen from lakeside being guarded by the Sheriff's department until investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration could arrive from Denver to search the wreckage for indications of what caused the mishap.

Utah County Sheriff Mack Holley said the crash was not the first at Provo Municipal Airport, citing three other fatal mishaps in the last 20 years.

Talley decided to land at Provo Municipal Airport for safety reasons.

Marines attacked One man shot, killed; others escape

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Snipers killed a U.S. Marine on Sunday in an intense barrage of grenade and automatic rifle fire on a U.S. helicopter unloading troops near the American Embassy in Beirut.

The Marine, who was not immediately identified, was the first member of the multinational peace-keeping force to die in 1984 and the 258th American serviceman killed since U.S. forces entered Lebanon in September 1982.

The attack marked the second Marine casualty in two days. Two Marines were slightly wounded Saturday when fighting between the Lebanese army and Druse Moslem rebels spilled over into their compound at Beirut Airport.

The morning attack on the Marines came as the foreign ministers of Syria, Lebanon and Saudi Arabia met in Riyadh to resolve "sticking points" of a security plan to stop the fighting in and around Beirut.

Marine Spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said a large CH-46 helicopter "came under intense small arms and rocket-propelled grenade fire" as it was delivering a Marine work party to the embassy.

The Marines fought back with their M-16 rifles and the 30-caliber machine guns of the Chinook helicopter. Guards down the road at the American Embassy rushed to defensive positions.

One Marine in the work party was hit in the back in the exchange and was pronounced dead after being rushed to the American University Hospital, Brooks said.

"The wound was a bullet in the right side of his back," said a nurse at the hospital. "When he came in he was dead, and we tried to resuscitate him. He had lost too much blood."

Brooks said the assailants fired from windows of the high-rise buildings facing the Lebanese officers' beach club where the Marines regularly use a parking lot to land. He said the Lebanese army searched one of the buildings and "found some weapons."

It was the first American killed in Beirut since Dec. 4 when eight Marines died during shelling by Moslem rebel forces.

Marines guarding the temporary U.S. Embassy, less than a mile away immediately scrambled to positions behind the concrete wall blocking the main seaside road.

The survivors of the attack drove from the makeshift landing pad at the extreme west of the city to the embassy.

As the Marine truck drove through the gate, the men scrambled off the back and took up positions behind the concrete barriers that have proliferated since the Oct. 23 suicide truck-bomb attack on the Marines at their main Beirut airport compound that killed 241 U.S. troops.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli Cabinet brushed aside reports the military was urging a unilateral withdrawal from Lebanon and declared Israeli troops would not be taken out unless there is a simultaneous Syrian withdrawal.

Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat, meanwhile, told a Jordanian newspaper he will soon visit Amman to resume talks with King Hussein on a joint PLO-Jordanian Middle East peace initiative.

Duplex party raided, 30 people arrested

By LAURA CHILDERS

Two former BYU students have been arrested and charged with various counts of drug possession and distribution after University Police raided a party in December.

University Police Chief Robert Kelshaw said charges are pending against other former students and non-students who were among the 30 people arrested when the raid occurred.

Paul Edmond Cooper of San Diego was enrolled as a BYU student at the time of his arrest. He was charged with two counts of possession of cocaine and marijuana, Kelshaw said.

Jeff Draper, of Santa Ana, Calif., was not enrolled at BYU but is a former student. He was charged with one count of distribution of cocaine.

There were five other BYU students arrested at the raid and charges are pending against them, he said.

Approximately 15 minors were also arrested, Kelshaw said, and referrals have been filed against them for alcohol and narcotics violations.

University Police Investigator Mike Colvin said the investigation of the incident did not progress as quickly as it could have because many of those involved had left town for the holidays.

Colvin said there were as many as 120 people at the party when police began watching the house on the night the raid occurred, but by the time a warrant was obtained the number had dwindled.

Officials confiscated cocaine and marijuana valued at $600 to $700 from the duplex where the party was held, which had been approved by the university as student housing, Kelshaw said.

"This raid really culminated a three-month investigation of narcotics," he said.

employment rate rises to 8.2 percent December recovery

INGTON (UPI) — Unemployment had the steepest 12-month drop in 33 years during 1983, sliding in December as the season recovery persisted, the Census Bureau announced Friday.

The administration now forecasts a 7.8 percent average unemployment level for this year. Unemployment was 7.4 percent when Reagan took office.

The number of unemployed fell by 230,000 in December to 9.2 million, down 2.6 million from the recession high. But the department said there are another 1.5 million "discouraged workers"—those out of a job and not trying for work because they believe they cannot find it. It said a disproportionate share, 31 percent, are black workers.

White House press secretary Frances Spokes said the Labor Department, with other economic heartening to the administration, had the best auto sales performance in five years. . . . Christmas retail stores were the highest in a decade and stock market prices yesterday were near record levels," Spokes said. "These figures, business activity and employment provide an optimistic outlook for 1984."

Flier returns home, town welcomes hero

MANCHESTER, N.H. (UPI) — Navy Lt. Robert Goodman Jr. was due back in New Hampshire Sunday to attend a hero's homecoming celebration Monday in his hometown of Portsmouth.

Goodman's arrival came a day after Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson appeared at a rally at Portsmouth High School without the Navy flier he helped free from Syrian captivity.

Goodman, 27, his wife Terri Lynn, and their two children were to fly in from Virginia Beach, Va., on a private plane provided at the request of Gov. John Sununu, who was to present Goodman with a state flag at a brief ceremony at the airport.

"An individual who asked to remain anonymous offered to make his plane available and fly the Goodmans to New Hampshire," said Sununu spokesman Ed Lecus.

About 2,000 people — students, former teachers and state officials — were expected to attend the "Welcome Back to your High School, Bobby Goodman" celebration scheduled Monday morning in Portsmouth, school Superintendent Timothy Monahan said.

Goodman originally was to appear at a rally Saturday with Jackson, who persuaded Syria to free Goodman from his month-long captivity Jan. 3. The celebration was rescheduled for Monday because the Navy did not want Goodman to appear at a political rally.

Jackson went ahead with his rally Saturday at the high school and was greeted by some 400 people. He told the crowd he gave the Syrians a "moral appeal higher than military forces" to help win Goodman's release.

Great Salt Lake rises, spurs legislative action

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The possibility of the relentlessly rising Great Salt Lake inundating the Salt Lake International Airport and other areas has swung many lawmakers toward favoring a plan to breach the Southern Pacific Railroad causeway. Flooding will be one of the first issues tackled by the 104 lawmakers in the 20-day budget session, in which legislative leaders will submit a $45.8 million supplemental appropriations bill.

That sum would finish paying for last year's flooding and prepare for the spring's expected inundation.

The railroad causeway divides the lake into two sections, the north end lower than the south end, which is lapping over Interstate 15 and threatening millions of dollars in other public and private property.

Cutting a 300-foot breach in the causeway and building a trestle across it would be only a bid for time in the battle against the rising lake, which is at its highest level in nearly a century and still climbing.

South Africa withdraws from invasion of Angola

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — South Africa ended its internationally condemned invasion of Marxist Angola Sunday, claiming overwhelming success against Angolan-based guerrillas fighting for the independence of Namibia.

South African forces began withdrawing, leaving more than 1,000 fighters of the South West African People's Organization in northward flight and the group's military apparatus in disarray, Defense Minister Magnus Malan said in Pretoria.

The withdrawal came two days after a U.N. Security Council resolution deploring the invasion and demanding a pullout, but Malan made no reference to the demand. Foreign Minister Roelof Botha Saturday rejected the U.N. call.

Malan warned SWAPO that "if necessary" firm action would be taken again, regardless of the consequences.

He said SWAPO, which has fought for more than 15 years for the independence of South African-controlled South West Africa (Namibia) "had not yet experienced the full capability" of the South African army.

But he said South Africa agreed that the "intelligence issue had to be solved at the conference table and not by military force."

The operation began on Dec. 6, in response to what Pretoria said were "confirmed intelligence reports" of a planned rainy-season SWAPO offensive into uranium-rich Namibia early in the year.

South Africa said 21 of its troops died, and claimed to have killed some 400 SWAPO guerrillas and Angolan troops during the month-long offensive.

Solid defense and some offensive trickery helped the BYU Cougars come away with a last-second 21-17 victory over the Missouri Tigers in Holiday Bowl 6.

"It's the Holiday Bowl," said BYU Head Coach LaVell Edwards, who has been involved in five frantic finishes in San Diego since the Holiday Bowl began in 1978. "What else can you say about a finish like that?"

"It was a hard-fought game and our guys played very well," said a disappointed Warren Powers, Missouri head coach. "I'm proud of the way we played — especially our defense and it was the right one. That's the chance you take."

"I want to say that I think Steve Young is the best quarterback I've ever seen in college football."

While the offense took the spotlight with its final scoring drive, it was BYU's defense that won this Holiday Bowl and enabled the Cougars — who finished No. 7 in both wire service polls — to improve their record to 11-1.

"What pleases me most was that the defense came and played a great game," Edwards said. "I'm glad to see us win a game with our defense."

The BYU defense made several big plays throughout the game, but none of them was bigger than the goal-line stand with four minutes remaining in the game.

Leading 17-14, the Tigers had a fourth-and-two on the BYU 7-yard line. Everyone in the stadium knew who would get the call.

Tiger fullback Eric Drain, who rushed for 115 yards on 27 carries and was voted the game's top offensive player, got the ball. But the Cougar defense rose to the challenge and stopped Drain short of the first down.

"BYU's defense played extremely well in short-yardage situations," Powers said. "You've got to give them a lot of credit."

"It was a great defensive play by the five guys that made the tackle," said Cougar linebacker Todd Shell, who finished his career at BYU with another outstanding performance. "We knew they were going to be running and Coach Felt (defensive coordinator Dick) called the defense and it was the right one. That's the chance you take."

Fortunately for the Cougars, the call worked. The offense had one final chance to score.

With a first down on their own 7-yard line, the Cougars wasted little time in moving the ball when Young passed to wide receiver Mike Eddo for 17 yards to the BYU 24. But after Young was sacked by Tiger linebacker Bobby Bell at the Cougar 19, the situation looked grim for another Holiday Bowl win for the Cougars.

Then Young made the first of three key plays on the final drive, throwing a high-arching bomb to Eddo that put BYU on the Missouri 36.

"It felt like a punt return," said Eddo, who was making his first appearance for the Cougars since breaking his clavicle against Utah State. "The ball was so high it looked like it was floating there — and the Missouri secondary was running right at me. You just don't think about anything but the ball."

With exactly one minute remaining and BYU facing a third-and-one on the Tiger 16, Young was sacked on the Missouri 25-yard line, putting the Cougars in a fourth-and-10 situation.

The senior quarterback then combined with Waymon Hamilton for the second key play of the drive as he hit the halfback for 11 yards and a first down on the Missouri 14 with 31 seconds left in the game.

Then assistant coach Norm Chow, who calls the offensive plays for the Cougars, made the call of the season as far as the Cougars are concerned: "Sweep 28, QB screen."

The play, which BYU has run in practice to break up the monotony, was designed to have Young hand off to halfback Eddie Stinnett on an apparent sweep to the right side. But Stinnett stops and throws the ball back to Young, who is in the left flat.

Although Edwards was surprised with the call when it came over the headphones, he said he had no intention of changing it.

"At that time, I was so numb I couldn't veto any play."

"We have that play, but we've never used it," Stinnett said. "They (Missouri) were leaving the backside open and the coaches called it from upstairs. All we had to do was execute."

And the Cougars did execute.

Stinnett took the ball from Young and ran right. Then he pulled up and lobbed the ball over the outstretched fingertips of Bell.

Young then grabbed the ball with his fingertips and raced end zone.

"I should have played it gone for the tackle," Bell said.

"I thought he (Bell) was hit it and that threw me," Young said. "I caught the half of the ball and as soon as I caught it Adam (wide receiver Haysbert) made a great end zone that allowed me to make a move."

Touchdown Cougars.

Although the Cougars came on top, Missouri had things until the final four minutes.

The Tigers controlled the game like they wanted to in order to win the Holiday Bowl. The high-powered BYU offense was kept off the sidelines. Missouri had a 37-minute game plan that gained 266 yards rushing and 100 yards passing.

"We laid off for about 10 minutes and that's really hard for a team like BYU," Young said.

"We were trying to get the yardage on every play in order to just try to sink it for slow days. They also made so many plays and had a good passing game."

The Cougars, who were looking for some recognition before the Holiday Bowl, hoped they would win a Big Eight Conference title — and a national championship.

"Some people back in Eight are saying we can't win the WAC," Tumalu said. "I care where it is in college can play."

But in the fourth quarter, the West defense forced Hostetler to cough up the ball at the 3 and Lupe Sanchez of UCLA picked off a Hostetler pass at the goal line with no time remaining to preserve the victory.

The work of the defense also set up the West's first score when Reggie Singletary of Kansas State stripped Ohio State's Vaughn Broadnax of the ball and Jeff Leiding of Texas recovered at the East's 12, 35 seconds after the opening kickoff.

Young passed 8 yards to Jim Sandusky of San Diego State and then teamed with Lewis to complete the short scoring drive.

Another Young-Sandusky completion, for 52 yards, set up Young's 11-yard scoring run.

shooting performances I have ever seen.

In the late innings you want them shooting 22-footers from the outside," Andersen said. "They are a good shooting team."

Weber State Head Coach Neil McCarthy said the Wildcats were not shooting from the outside by choice. "When they went to the zone we were forced to go outside."

Even with Weber's hot outside shooting, the Cougars would have won the game handily in regulation if they had made their free throws. BYU missed three foul shots in the final 1:20.

"If we make the free throws in regulation time it is no contest," Andersen said.

The Cougars missed two free throws in the last 36 seconds that allowed the Wildcats to tie the score at 70 when 7-foot center Shawn Campbell hit a jumper from the key with 12 seconds left.

BYU then set up its final play but Durrant missed a jumper from the right side of the key to send the game into overtime.

Although Durrant missed the final shot in regulation, the senior forward turned in another outstanding game for the Cougars as he scored 35 points and pulled down eight rebounds.

"He really carried his club and made the big plays for them," McCarthy said. "We did our best on him and he still scored 35 points. He was incredible."

After both teams traded baskets early in the overtime period, the Cougars took the lead for good when forward Mike Smith hit a jump shot to give BYU a 76-74 lead with 2:38 left in the game. After a quiet first half, Smith finished the game with 16 points and six rebounds before fouling out in the overtime period.

After BYU stretched its lead to 80-75, Weber State started to foul. But this time the Cougars made their foul shots as they went 10-10 from the charity stripe to close out the game and end the losing streak.

"I'm very proud of the way our team played," McCarthy said. "It was a very evenly played game. The difference was that BYU was able to convert pressure free throws."

Redskins knock off 49ers; Raiders trounce Seahawks

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The Washington Redskins, the defending Super Bowl champion, and the Los Angeles Raiders, the last AFC team to win the Super Bowl, Sunday advanced to the NFL title game.

Super Bowl XVIII on Jan. 22 at Tampa Stadium will be a rematch of one of the best games this season — Washington's 37-35 victory over the Raiders.

The Redskins edged the San Francisco 49ers 24-21 Sunday when Mark Moseley redeemed himself by kicking a 25-yard field goal with 40 seconds remaining at RFK Stadium in Washington.

The Raiders had an easier time, rolling behind quarterback Jim Plunkett, running back Marcus Allen and five interceptions to a 30-14 rout of the Seattle Seahawks at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

The Redskins, who have won 11 straight and 31 of 34, were aided by two penalties against San Francisco defensive backs in their winning drive. Moseley capped the drive with the field goal after missing four previous attempts.

The 49ers, 10-point underdogs and operating without their best receiver, injured Dwight Clark, stormed from a 21-0 deficit after three periods and tied the score midway through the fourth quarter in a matchup between the last two NFL champions.

But the Redskins, who set an NFL record with 541 points during the regular season, regained their composure and began the winning drive from their 14 with 6:52 left. John Riggins, who gained 123 yards on 36 carries, triggered the drive with a 17-yard gain and Joe Theismann found Art Monk for 11 yards to the 49ers' 45.

On 2nd-and-10, Theismann threw incomplete to Monk but cornerback Eric Wright was flagged for a 27-yard interference penalty to the 18. On 3rd-and-5 from the 13, All-Pro cornerback Ronnie Lott was whistled for a 3-yard holding penalty to give the Redskins another first down.

After three runs by Riggins — who posted his record sixth straight 100-yard game in post-season — Moseley converted from 25 yards.

Joe Montana, who completed 27-of-48 passes for 347 yards, threw for three touchdowns in the fourth quarter to bring the 49ers back. He hit Mike Wilson on scoring passes of 5 and 12 yards, sandwiched around a 70-yard strike to Freddie Solomon.

The Raiders had lost twice to Seattle in the regular season, committing 13 turnovers in the process, but on Sunday it was Los Angeles which forced the mistakes.

Cougars win 3 of 5 during break

By SCOTT D. PIERCE

Asst. Sports Editor

The BYU basketball team won three of five games over the holiday break to enter 1984 with a record of 6-4.

On Dec. 16 and 17, the Cougars played in the Kentucky Invitational Tournament in Lexington, taking on highly touted and unbeaten Virginia Commonwealth in the first round.

After falling behind by as much as 11 points early in the second half, the Cougars slowly fought their way back, taking a 66-65 lead with 7:24 left in the game.

After ties at 66, 68 and 70, the Cougars went ahead 73-70 on a three-point play by Scott Sinek. They never relinquished the lead, winning 81-77.

As a result of their biggest win of the year, the Cougars received the dubious honor of facing top-ranked Kentucky in the championship game of the tournament.

Down by nine with 6:53 remaining in the first half, BYU outscored Kentucky 17-6 to take a surprising 36-34 halftime lead.

But in the second half, the Cougars went cold and the Wildcats got hot. During one stretch Kentucky scored 23 unanswered points en route to a 93-58 blowout.

Devin Durrant, named tournament MVP, scored 33 points to lead BYU.

Back home in Provo on Dec. 21, BYU took on the Oregon Ducks of the Pac-10. The score remained close until the end of the first half, when the Cougars opened up an eight-point halftime bulge.

But the Ducks tied the score at 53 with 15 minutes remaining. After five ties and two lead changes, Oregon went ahead 78-77 with 38 seconds remaining.

Following a timeout, Mike Smith sank a shot from just inside the key with four seconds remaining to give BYU a 79-78 victory.

The Cougars faced Boise State on Dec. 23. The Broncos jumped off to an early 6-0 lead, and after BYU tied the score at eight Boise State built a 30-19 lead with just under six minutes remaining in the half.

The Cougars, led by Brett Applegate and Brian Taylor, went into two at halftime.

The second half was all BYU. The Cougars took the lead a minute and a half into the period and never looked back, coming out on top of a 66-54 score.

On Dec. 28, BYU played then No. 7 UCLA in Los Angeles. After knocking the score at 12 only five and a half minutes into the game, BYU could manage only 11 points in the next 11 minutes while UCLA scored 32 to take a 44-23 lead.

The Cougars outscored the Bruins nine to one in the final two minutes to close to within 13 at halftime.

Led by Applegate with eight points and Durrant with six, BYU came storming back in the second half to draw to within three at 56-53 with just under nine minutes remaining. The Cougars kept it close for the next five minutes before UCLA stretched its lead, winning 82-78.

Consumption of fatty foods could lead to heart disease

By CAROL JENSEN
Teaching Assistant

The holidays are over, but perhaps the effects of over indulging in Christmas fudge, turkey and pie may have triglyceride levels registering a little higher.

Every human body contains triglycerides. They are necessary to supply energy, to keep the skin soft and to stave off hunger, but they may also be linked to coronary heart disease.

A triglyceride is one of three types of fat in the body. At body temperature, it is a liquid and is the main form in which fat is stored in fat cells.

It is transported throughout the body on lipoproteins, the second kind of fat. A triglyceride can exist by itself in fat or liver cells, but when it is being carried in the blood, it has to ride on these lipoproteins, as does cholesterol, the third type of fat.

Triglycerides may be dangerous because they can precipitate heart failure, said Donna Schofield, a dietitian at Utah Valley Hospital. "There is no unequivocal conclusion linking triglycerides with coronary heart disease, but there is strong evidence showing that they lead to building up of plaque in the arteries."

This build-up leads to hardening of the arteries, a condition known as arteriosclerosis, which is a cause of heart disease. Dr. Garth Fisher, director of the Human Performance Laboratory and a professor of physical education at BYU, explained that in high concentration, triglycerides have a slugging effect on the blood.

The slowed blood allows the triglycerides and other fat cells to accumulate along the blood vessel walls, clogging the vessels.

Fisher said a normal triglyceride level is from 150 to 200 milligrams per 100 milliliters of blood serum. "But we see people with 800 to 900 milligrams," he said, "and that's dangerous."

Such high levels may be hereditary, but diet seems to be the main cause of elevated triglycerides.

The higher the fat intake, the higher the triglyceride level, Schofield said. "And the American intake is very high. About 40 percent of our calories are derived from fat."

Schofield said a more desirable level of fat intake is 30 to 35 percent, with the emphasis being on unsaturated fats.

Unsaturated fats include corn oil, soybean oil and cottonseed oil. Saturated fats are most often found in foods such as butter and shortening. Red meats are also high in saturated fats, while fish and poultry are not.

"If a person has an elevated triglyceride level," she said, "a low-cholesterol diet will help, but there are foods that contain triglycerides and not cholesterol, so an overall reduction in fat is needed."

Schofield said it is important for all people to cut back on fatty foods, but if a person is prone to heart disease, the reduction becomes even more important.

Fisher suggested some low-cholesterol, low-fat foods that may be substituted quite easily for foods high in cholesterol and saturated fats.

Substitute egg whites for egg yolks, he said, as well as skim milk for whole milk; whey cheeses for regular cheeses; sherbert for ice cream; lean red meats for fatty marbled meats; and fish and chicken for hot dogs, luncheon meats, sausage and bacon.

Schofield said triglycerides are not necessarily reduced by exercise, but if the triglyceride levels are lower to begin with, they can be kept in control by exercising.

Fisher said exercise burns up fats in the body, so it works well as a secondary fat reduction tool in conjunction with diet.

Exercise also pumps the blood rapidly through the vessels, Schofield said, not allowing the fat build-ups along the vessel walls.

The author of "Maximum Life Span," Dr. Roy L. Walford, said exercise increases the production of high density lipoproteins, which impede cholesterol accumulation and pick up or remove fat from cells.

By SANDY WISEMAN
Lifestyle Editor

Beginning today, The Daily Universe will increase its efforts to serve the needs of BYU students with its new "Lifestyle" section.

Pages formerly used for entertainment articles only will now take in a broader range of topics including health, consumerism, academics, career exploration and interpersonal relations.

However, the needs met by the entertainment section previously found in this newspaper will not be ignored. Coverage of entertainment events will be printed on the "Lifestyle" pages. Also, "Flick Flack" will continue to be each Friday to keep students up to date on latest movies and events.

Universe editors created this new section with the idea of focusing more on student needs. Devoting an entire section of the paper to this function should accomplish this in an organized, consistent manner.

Suzuki method to be taught

A class to train musicians in the Suzuki method of violin instruction will be offered Winter Semester at BYU.

It will be taught by Hiroko Primrose who received her training from Dr. Shinichi Suzuki, the founder of the Suzuki method.

Primrose has taught the Suzuki method for several years in Utah, Indiana and Australia, according to David Dalton, a professor of music at BYU.

"Those who wish to enroll in this teacher class should be violinists with the ability to play through Book VI of the Suzuki method. Students need not be BYU students," Dalton said.

The class will begin Jan. 11. The fee is persons without a college degree and $154 for university graduates.

Interested persons should register in Evening Classes in 120 HCEB.

Docudrama to feature LDS artist

A documentary/drama on the life of C. C. A. Christensen will be shown Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. as part of a reception for the annual BYU Art Faculty Exhibition in BYU's Gallery 308, HFAC.

Christensen, an LDS artist in the late 1800s, would travel to various meeting houses throughout Utah, set up his scroll of 23 canvases and take patrons on a trip through the history of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The 27-minute docudrama about Christensen was created by Robert Marshall, a member of the BYU art faculty.

Marshall described Christensen as "a primitive, naive sort of painter."

"His works may at first glance appear clumsy, but they're honest and straightforward. Here was an individual with a burning, creative mission; he had to paint these things," he added.

converts face paradox dealing with family

By SANDY WISEMAN
Lifestyle Editor

Family unit is a top priority in the theology of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. However, conversion to this religion separates families apart — a paradoxical situation. Recent estimates show that about 20 percent of 5 households in the United States are member families — families in which some, all, members belong to the LDS Church. In Heaton, a BYU assistant professor of psychology, said this particular type of frustration frequently in the LDS Church and others where "religion is a way of life."

Whatever the case, most converts must have some degree of decrease in communication with family. According to Dr. Burton Kelly, a counseling psychologist for the BYU Comprehensive Clinic, "don't have a common ground to communicating things that are really important to you," he said.

He cited the example of the frustration that when a person attends an uplifting religious but cannot share his experience with his family.

Tom Smallwood, a senior from Boulder, Colo., majoring in design and graphic technology, agreed. "Even if I have to break the Sabbath to be with my family, I don't feel bad, because I get more out of it," he said.

"If the family is out planting on Sunday, and I go out and help, I have a greater influence on them than by being pious," he added.

Smallwood said initially his parents did not react favorably toward his joining the LDS Church. However, they attended his baptism and flew to Ireland to pick him up after his mission. He said they respect his commitment to his beliefs and have been very supportive.

Yet even with supportive parents, conflicts can arise when a child expresses a desire to be married in an LDS temple.

Since only worthy LDS Church members can attend temple weddings, this can be a touchy point with non-LDS parents who have looked forward to their child's wedding for years, Kelly said.

Kelchler has not approached her parents on the subject, opting to "cope with the situation when it comes up."

Smallwood said his mother seemed a little hurt about not being able to attend his wedding, but both of his parents respect his wishes.

Along with parents respecting their children's wishes, converts also feel their future families should love and respect their non-LDS relatives.

"It is important for my children to love my family and understand that there are people who think differently," Haszlauer said.

Kelly added, "A number of people are reluctant to get too involved with someone whose parents are not members, because when you marry, you marry the family."

However, he cautioned members of the LDS Church to not let parental religion be the primary factor in deciding whether to marry someone.

mbassadors' to perform

BYU Young Ambassadors will perform "Entertainment USA" on Tuesday and Wednesday in the DeWitt Concert Hall, HFAC at 8 p.m. The 12-member ensemble and show under the direction of Randy and Dee Winterton, will present a 90-minute salute to the moments in America's entertainment history.

According to Boothe, the show will feature a 1940s radio spot, a salute to popular television, a circus number, country and Broadway numbers, and with the many different numbers, Boothe said, "Each performer will have approximately 20 costume changes."

"In addition, many of the nation's best-loved screen and radio personalities will come alive during the program, including the "M*A*S*H" medics and the shipwrecked crew from "Gilligan's Island."

Tickets for the production are on sale in the HFAC music ticket office. The Young Ambassadors are in their 14th year of performing. During the past year they have performed in major cities throughout Australia and New Zealand and made stops in Tahiti and Hawaii appearing before live audiences totaling 44,000 and 5 million television viewers.

Bishop Brown outlines three gospel principles

By JULIE STIBRAL
Campus Editor

Faith, repentance and obedience are three principles of the gospel needed to find true happiness in this life, said Bishop Victor L. Brown, Presiding Bishop of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints at the 14-stake fireside Sunday.

Bishop Brown said that students need to follow the words of Alma, found in the Book of Mormon, Another Testament of Jesus Christ. "Let us follow the counsel of Alma, and plant the seed of faith, nourish it and let it grow."

He then related a story of a woman whose faith was strengthened after losing her vision following a cornea transplant. For 10 months, the woman spent time meditating and quiet peace erased the pressures of time, Bishop Brown said.

Following a second cornea transplant, most of the woman's vision was restored and doctors called it a miracle, he said.

He also told members of the audience he was once stricken with an illness that might have been fatal if the proper care was not taken. "I was told to go east to a hospital, but before I left the First Presidency and members of the Council of the Twelve laid their hands on my head and gave me a blessing."

Following the blessing, Bishop Brown said President Harold B. Lee told him that "the Lord expects you to do everything possible to be a well man."

Bishop Brown added, "This is our challenge — to do everything possible we can to bring about change."

The presiding bishop said repentance is also a key to achieving happiness.

"The Lord, through his great love, has given us a saving principle. The Lord recognizes our human frailty. He has given us our free agents and won't force salvation on us."

He said repentance requires four steps: recognition of wrong, confession to the Lord — and confession to the bishop in the case of serious sins, restitution and refraining from indulging in the sin.

Bishop Brown told members of the audience that repentance takes time and also requires a broken heart and contrite spirit.

Regarding obedience, Bishop Brown related the story of Abraham, in which he is commanded to sacrifice his only son, Isaac, as a burnt offering.

He quoted from Genesis 22: 10-12, saying, "And Abraham stretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay his son. And the angel of the Lord called unto him out of heaven, and said, Abraham, Abraham: and he said, Here am I."

"And he said, Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him: for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son from me."

Bishop Brown said Abraham's offering of Isaac is the supreme test of obedience.

A native of Cardston, Alberta, Canada, Bishop Brown serves on the executive committee of the BYU Board of Trustees and the Church Board of Education.

Choice and cost of housing different for BYU students

By JEAN ESPLIN
Staff Writer

Housing available to students in many parts of the country often varies from the housing available to BYU students.

At BYU, about 13,000 of the approximately 20,000 single, undergraduate students rent off-campus housing, according to John Pace, manager of residential housing at BYU.

At some other universities, such as Stanford, the trend is reversed with the majority of the students living on campus.

At Stanford, 5,400 of the 6,000 undergraduate students live on campus, according to Deborah Drew, assistant to the director of the housing office at Stanford.

About half the students at some other universities, such as Boston College and the University of Northern Arizona, live off campus.

At the University of Northern Arizona, 5,106 of the university's 12,000 students live on campus, according to Sheila Friedman, an employee of the university's housing office.

Still other universities follow the BYU pattern with most students living off campus.

At George Washington University, where there is a student body of 16,000 students, the on-campus housing capacity is only 2,500, according to Cammy Tadizrian, an employee of the housing office at George Washington University.

The types of housing both on and off campus available to students varies widely, too.

"Provo is different from other towns — even college towns. Here, we have a dichotomy. Landlords here don't rent by the apartment. They rent by the space," Pace said.

Some landlords rent exclusively to single students and rent by the space. Others rent only to married students and rent by the apartment.

Space for a single student in Provo ranges from about $80 to $120 a month, with from four to six spaces to an apartment, Pace said.

Other students live with parents or relatives or in places owned by their parents such as condominiums, he said.

Off-campus housing in other areas can be much more expensive because of local conditions.

Stanford is situated in an area consisting of single family dwellings without many apartments, Drew said.

A one-bedroom apartment can be rented in the Stanford area for $325 to $600 a month, she said.

ASBYU sponsors book exchange

The annual ASBYU-sponsored book exchange can take some of the pain out of buying and selling textbooks, according to operators of the exchange.

Prices are set by the owner of the textbooks, said Ivy Greene, a member of the Intercollegiate Knights, one sponsor of the book exchange.

"Anyone who has books to sell can take them to the ELWC Garden Court. The owner then fills out a contract and sets the price of the book. All we do is provide a place for books to sit while other students can look through them," Greene said.

To buy a book, a student simply decides on the book and pays the amount to the cashier, she said.

The book exchange is sponsored by the ASBYU Academics Office and the Intercollegiate Knights, and it will be conducted today through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"The book exchange takes 3 percent to pay for the cashier and supplies. The remainder of the money is picked up by the student selling the book," Greene said.

A computer printout will be posted daily for the owner to see if the book has been sold. Greene said all books that have not been sold can be picked up Jan. 16 and 17.

ACADEMIC YEAR²

If you have at least two years of graduate or undergraduate education ahead, and you keep getting clues that your money is running short, then a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship may be the solution. Currently we're seeking young men and women who would like to serve their nation as Air Force Officers. Consequently, if you're majoring in a selected, technical/non-technical, scientific, nursing, or pre-medical field, or can qualify for pilot, navigator, or missile training, then you may be eligible for a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship. The scholarship pays your tuition, job fees, (plus incidental fees), books, and $100 per month tax free. And even if you don't qualify for the two-year scholarship, you still receive the $100 a month while enrolled in the Air Force ROTC two-year program.

What do we ask in return? That you serve America at least four years as an Air Force officer. Your Air Force ROTC counselor has the details and qualification requirements. Check it out! It might even make your education finances seem elementary.

When Ther-Max told me I could earn enough to support myself all year in school... I Laughed...

Sure I laughed. Tuition and books are expensive enough. Then there are activities, dates and food, not to mention rent and transportation. There was no way I was going to be able to live and attend college without a part-time job.

But I discovered that Ther-Max is a big company, one of the largest Home Energy Marketing Companies in the United States. Very solid and reputable. Nothing here to laugh about. It looked good so I decided to give it a try. I knew I couldn't make anywhere near that kind of money around here. You know what? I've been laughing ever since!

I'm now living in a nice apartment. I have the time and money for all the activities and dates I want, and most important, I can now attend school full time! Ther-Max, you're great! I made more last summer than many people make in a whole year! You bet I'm laughing... all the way to the bank!

We'd like to tell you more about the Ther-Max opportunity and how it can make your life happier, too. Call us at 375-1977 in Provo for more information.

City renovation halts, 50 workers laid off

By DAN HARRIS
Senior Reporter

Provo's downtown renovation project came to a sudden halt when more than 50 construction workers were laid off last week.

Although the fourth phase of the project is near completion, many workers were surprised by the layoff. "We were told that unless the funding for the next phase of the project is received within the next couple of weeks, we would be out of our jobs," said a construction worker who did not want to be identified.

According to Craig Call, general contractor and managing partner for Provo Town Square, the layoff is due to the completion of the fourth phase of the project, which is scheduled to officially open with a speech by Sen. Jake Garn on Jan. 19.

Call said the original investors from Hawaii have committed themselves to five additional phases of the project. "The funding for the fifth phase is promised for the new year, but no exact timetable has been set," he said.

As of Friday, three more of the remaining 15 workers were let go and Call said his crew will be down to eight within a short time.

One construction worker who wanted to remain anonymous said if he didn't find a job or get hired back within a couple weeks he would go to California. When asked about working for Provo Town Square associates, he said, "It has been a different type of job, but if I was called back tomorrow, I'd come back."

Call and Doug Stuart, public relations director for Provo Town Square, said additional investors for the project were being considered.

Although the $2.75 million project has been totally funded by private funds, a government grant is being considered for the construction of a multi-level parking garage and the renovation of the facade of the Uinta Theater.

The remaining construction workers are doing some finishing work on the project and have begun the renovation of the Bank Building on the northeast corner of the Center Street and University Avenue intersection, Call said.

According to Call, the reduction of workers will only be temporary. Provo Town Square's 12 buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Sites and contain approximately 120,000 square feet on four levels.

Provo Town Square restoration funding became available in 1981 with the passage of the Economic Recovery Act, which allows a tax incentive for the purchase and restoration of historic buildings.

Call said he is pleased to have Garn speak at the upcoming grand opening because he "chairs the Senate Committee which approved the legislation that made this project a reality."

Stuart said 65 to 70 percent of the basement- and ground-level levels have been leased and 10 to 15 percent of the upper office-level space, which is just being finished, is leased.

Upcoming project phases include the restoration of the Gates and Snow building at 45 East Center St.; an elevator, plaza landscaping and outside walkways with coverings in the Provo Town Square mall; renovation of the Uinta Theater; and construction of a multi-level parking garage.

Provo Town Square associates hope to continue to purchase and restore historic buildings in Provo.

A British double-decker bus will be used for a couple of days during the grand opening to conduct historical tours of Provo.

The lay-off of 50 workers last week has stopped construction on the renovation of Provo Town Square. Funding for the project is expected soon, but more lay-offs are also foreseen.

Mall has prospects 18 years later

By VINCE WATSON
Staff Writer

The city of Provo is currently considering construction of a major shopping mall that many feel should have been built 18 years ago, according to some city residents.

Provo cut its own throat by not building a proposed mall somewhere in the city during the 1960s," said Robert E. Allen, owner of a local retail store. "My opinion is that the people of Provo completely dropped the ball on constructing a mall that would have benefited our city."

Allen's father served on the Provo Golden Era Commission in the 1960s. "At that time a mall was just a hiss and rumor. He tried to get support for a shopping center in the downtown district, the area of the Cougar Stadium west parking lot," Allen said. "Because of greedy holdouts, they wanted it either on West Center Street or not at all."

In 1965 Provo conducted a special election on a referendum for a proposed Urban Renewal Development project. "This project would have allowed the city to condemn areas of downtown and then sell the land to developers," said local attorney Dallas H. Young Jr. The referendum dealt with making downtown land cheaper and more available for development.

Young continued, "The Provo City Council allocated $10,000 for a feasibility study to determine if the ZCMI Corporation could locate in downtown Provo. The findings said that it was possible the department store could build downtown provided a number of things were resolved. The main item to be resolved was the high price of land in the downtown area."

"The ZCMI store would've been built on the block where the Provo Tabernacle presently stands," said local resident Ray Christensen. "The Provo residents voted against the referendum three to one, which would've brought down the cost of the land considerably," he said. During this period the city business district was thriving.

"Before the mall in Orem was built it was so busy in downtown Provo people got shoved off the sidewalks," said Allen. "In those days Provo had it all."

"The Urban Renewal Project would've had a bulldozer effect on the downtown section of the city," he said. "People were afraid of the drastic change that would've been implemented."

"The alternative presented by my father was to put the shopping center in an area further east of the present site, but still in Provo," Allen said. "This would've benefited Provo immensely from the sales tax. Many people were in favor of this, but they received no real support from the city."

"Provo City's position was all or nothing . . . either in downtown or not at all, and I think that was the main problem during that period of time," Allen said. "I'm surprised the people in Provo really thought the shopping center would eventually be on West Center."

Many people thought Provo would eventually end up with the mall. "I talked to a lot of people who even up to actual construction of the University Mall thought Provo would end up getting it," Christensen said. "Even with the writing on the wall and various signed deeds, they still didn't want to accept the fact that the shopping mall was going elsewhere."

"During the debate on the referendum one member of the commission wanted to put the mall in the old Provo brickyard, where a local fast-food outlet is now located," said Young. "But instead the developers went to Orem and purchased the land for 10 to 14 cents a square foot."

During the 1960s the various urban development programs were primarily untested, said Leland Gamette, executive assistant to Mayor James E. Ferguson. "This made a lot of people skeptical and somewhat afraid of what it would do."

"The basic philosophy of the program was a good one. In rundown areas that qualified for the grants the federal government gave money to cities to buy the land. The land was leveled and then sold to private contractors for further development."

"Because of the various projects from the 1960s, many cities across the country have large areas in the downtown that are leveled and wasted and have not been redeveloped," Gamette said.

Currently the Urban Development Program is more project-oriented. "Now you cannot even turn a spade of ground before major commitments are met by contractors and businesses coming into an area," said Gamette. "An excellent example is here in Provo with the recent completion of a major hotel. Before they began clearing land all commitments were met."

For the present project Gamette said, "All we need now is for a second major tenant to commit and we can begin construction."

Regarding the University Mall, Gamette said, "Some say the mall was signed, sealed and delivered for downtown Provo. I don't believe it. The philosophy of building malls then was not in downtown areas but in areas away from city centers. These compact malls were built on major transportation arteries."

Enclosing most of Center Street in a dome-like structure and creating a mall inside this area was also an idea that many supported. "My idea was to close Center Street to vehicle traffic and place a roof between the sides of the street," said BYU Law Professor Eugene B. Jacobs. If this were implemented, Jacobs said, "It would have had the same mall effect as we now have in Orem."

Alpine Board of Education to vote for additional tax for upgrading education

The Alpine Board of Education is scheduled to meet Tuesday to decide on the amount of tax increase it will propose to residents in the Alpine School District this year.

The proposed increase, called a voted levy, will enable the district to upgrade education, said Dr. Charles P. Lloyd, business administrator of the district. The proposed tax increase could be from about $725,000 to $3.6 million but is likely to be around $1 million, Lloyd said.

If the levy is passed for at least the minimum amount, the state will subsidize the district with an additional $500,000. The greatest obstacle to passage is the struggle between the need for better education and the need to keep taxes down, Lloyd said. "But we can't afford to pass up the state's offer of money."

The board will also discuss a progress report on the implementation of the eight-block school in the senior high schools.

A policy statement on the school properties and facilities other than educational purposes as political and religious.

Policies on employee relations and student excursions.

— The 1984 board meeting date.

The board will also appoint a member to the Public Involvement Council to represent Precinct PIC is a network of citizen councils of the Alpine School District.

The board meeting will be held at the Alpine School District headquarters, 39 N. American Fork, at 6 p.m.
